

Rob Grant - Project leader

Since 1979, Bobby, as he is often referred to, has been honing his skills and knowledge with his attitude based on lifelong learning. Beginning as a time served apprentice bricklayer with a company that, in those days, turned over £5M every year, he has embraced the Construction Industry and absorbed the fascinating depth and breadth of, not only, the practicality and theoretical aspects but also the nature of the service. He can then, with compassion and understanding, deliver the clients expectations with a quality and solutions-based approach based on the experience and wisdom gained throughout this period to date. Nothing is insurmountable.

After the first 5 years of study and practice, the City & Guilds bestowed the title of Master Craftsman with the designatory LCGI which is a lifelong award.

After 10 years and having occupied most of the roles available to an Industry participant up to and including Contracts manager, he began his business as a self-employed builder offering his expertise to the domestic market. This was a demanding period, as not only was he actively involved in producing the projects but also developing his own skills by attending college to master the techniques in Carpentry and Decorating

After 20 years, the body began to suffer, and it was time to take a break. He enrolled at the University of Bedfordshire to study for a BSc in Construction Management. During this period, a role to train as a Building Inspector was offered by the Local Authority and after just shy of 4 years, became a Member of the Chartered Institute of Building Engineers. This came with the designation of MCABE C.BuildE. (Membership has since lapsed). For the next 6 years, saw him join a private Building Control company with a large geographical area to cover. The experience and knowledge gained within this noble profession has since served him well.

Re-entering the industry as a contractor, has allowed him to grow in the use of current knowledge, techniques and product use and can now offer professional advice in addition to seeing a project through of any size. His particular niche is delivering beautiful extensions and loft conversions but really, anything involved in construction is of interest including historic and refurbishment as it all poses an opportunity to satisfy clients and produce beautiful results
